With this playset, kids can get into how humans interacted with nature in the primitive times. They reenact the achievement of early discoveries and appreciate that through trial and error comes learning and evolving.

PRIMITIVE LIFE

The first humans on planet Earth are the smartest creatures of all. We call them “primitive” because they are the first. The primitive humans find ways to survive, discover things to make their life better and comfortable, develop communication among each other, express themselves by painting!...

40 thousand years ago the primitive humans are more evolved than two million years ago. Through time, humans progress & become more and more intelligent.

TOOLS

Since the primitive humans are clever, they are capable of creating tools! Handmade tools out of wood, bones, stones are important for everyday life in the wild. A sharp rock becomes a hand axe, a crafted hardwood becomes a bat, necessary tools for digging, breaking, cutting, chopping, slicing... and as weapons for protection and hunting.

FIRE

The discovery of fire and how to make fire elevates the primitive humans' quality of life! By the fire they are warm, they try to bake their food and eat it cooked, they can see in the dark inside the cave and out during the night. Also, they are protected from the dangerous animals, which fear the fire.

FOOD

When the primitive humans are hungry, they search for food in nature. They walk around carefully to collect and eat nuts and fruit, seeds, wild greens, herbs, bulbs and roots of plants. Rarely, they find and eat honey from wild bee hives and sometimes they are lucky to find eggs of birds or other animals. They also fish or hunt animals to eat meat. Usually, they hunt just a lizard, which is a very nutritive delicacy for them, other times bigger animals like wild cattle or deer and sometimes they dare to search for mammoths.

CLOTHES

At the time, the primitive humans don't have so much hair on their body so it would be warm enough. Leather and fur from animals, tied or just draped over their body, is the best clothing idea for being warm! A piece of tree rope is a fine belt.

THE CAVE

The primitive humans need to protect themselves from the weather and from wild animals, especially when they sleep at night. They need a safe shelter. They find safety inside a cave and this becomes their house! The cave is a big hole inside a rock, which is created naturally - on its own and is protected from all sides. Oops! There is an open spot which needs to be closed... A big stone takes its place as a door!

FAMILY

Family is bonded. Surviving is the most important thing and family members know that helping and protecting each other benefits everyone. Teamwork ensures food and safety.

COMMUNICATION

Early humans can express thoughts and feelings with sounds, signs and gestures. They move their hands, point at things, imitate the sounds of birds and animals, yell, cry, call, roar, howl, cheer... They don't use words, they don't have an alphabet.

ART

Inside the cave, early humans feel safe. They use fire to see in the dark and have time to think and to make plans. They express themselves also by painting! They use mud - animal fat - burnt logs ...to paint on rocks! Mostly they paint animals and hunting scenes, hoping for empowerment and inspiration to succeed in hunting, which is very important in living.

Early humans decorate walls and ceilings of their cave, leaving a message that survives through time!

THE MIRACLE OF EVOLUTION

Discovered by future humans, cave paintings present evidence of life and triumph right here!

So, this is more or less how human life begins.

Human species keeps on changing and creating...
Humans change in appearance & resourcefulness.
They have accomplished works and artworks that appear as miracles!
